Knock on wood I am sleeping just fine Knock on wood I can cook for myself And the food that I cook is not fancy But I must say that it is better than in most restaurants

Knock On Wood Poem by Aldo Kraas - Poem Hunter
And I'll knock on wood to ensure I never, spill the salt shaker again, after all...they say bad luck comes in threes, and having lost my rabbit's foot, I'm down by two. They win. I'm looking to see, in this mirror I just broke, watch me smolder at the stroke of six six six--- after all...I hear I'm in for seven years,

Knock on Wood - a poem by Juliebuck - All Poetry
" Itchy ears, broken mirrors, and hats worn backward join wood spirits, ghosts, and of course black cats in this imaginative exploration of common and lesser-known superstitions. . . . Humor, satire, subplots, historic references, and decorative and surreal elements abound in artful profusion. There is much to ponder in both words and pictures. "

Eddie Floyd — Knock on Wood Lyrics | Genius Lyrics
Knocking on wood, also touch wood, is an apotropaic tradition of literally touching, tapping, or knocking on wood, or merely stating that one is doing or intending to do so, in order to avoid "tempting fate" after making a favorable prediction or boast, or a declaration concerning one's own death or another unfavorable situation. In some versions of the tradition, only one person, the speaker, is meant to "knock on wood".

Knocking on wood - Wikipedia
The shapely poems are infused with fey intimations in keeping with the collection's theme: "It is said/salt is magic. The pure kind, sea crystals./Spilled salt is magic flung wild." Some selections are haunting, and some humorous, as in this glimpse of a vampire's downfall: "All you bloodsuckers,/this is your last chance:/I am one bite/away-/from a hunk/of Mother's famous garlic chunk chicken."
